THREE RECRUITS.

Headed by Christopher Columbus Jones, to Join Coxey.

The Main Army Now Plodding Along Bad Roads Among the Snow. Covered Mountains.

PHILADELPHIA, Pa., April 12.—Promptly at the appointed time today Christopher Columbus Jones, division marshal of Coxey's commonweal army, and three recruits, started on their march to join the main body of the commonweal at Rockville, Md., a small town about fifteen miles from Washington.

Marshal Jones came forth with his headquarters at 1312 Filbert street followed by about a dozen persons. He paused on the pavement a few moments, and then shouted "March." The first person to make a move was a six footer, bearing a badly soiled United States flag; the others faltered a moment. The cold, drizzling rain had a dampening effect on their ardor and all but two decided to desert the army. Three desertions had no apparent effect on Christopher Columbus Jones.

With a small tent wrapped in a shawl strap in one hand and a map of the route to be traversed in the other, the marshal and his three faithfuls, Secretary C. T. McKee, William Phillips, and the big flag bearer, followed by three or four hundred hooting men and boys turned into Market street and were soon fairly on their dreary march.

The army will travel but five miles today. Their first stop will be Darby, a small town on the outskirts of this city. Marshal Jones had made great preparations for his army in Darby. A large hall, the worshiping place of the "Heavenly Recruits," had been engaged for Jones' prospective 1,500 followers, but the marshal now says his little tent will afford ample shelter for the army. Captain Clark, who has posed as a fiji museum freak, and a well known character about town, deserted last night and Aid-de-Camp George Marshall did not start with the army, but Marshal Jones says he will join the ranks later in the day.

CAMP HILL, Pa., April 12.—The army of the commonweal had not regained its accustomed sprightliness when the bugle was sounded in the old colonial stage house and brought the men slowly from their beds. Although 9 o'clock was the hour set for the march to be resumed the men were slow to move, not being sufficiently in harmony with the movement to consider with cheerfulness the leaving of rush warm and comfortable quarters for plodding through the snow of a dozen miles. The noon stop was at Somerfield and the camp tonight will be at Petersburg, probably in a consolidation. If the army have to spend the night in the thin tent there will be a revolt. Friday the army will cross the line into Maryland.

OMAHA, Neb., April 12.—Kelly's army of industrials has captured a Union Pacific train at Evanston, Wyo., and is now rolling east.

SOMERFIELD, Pa., April 12.—The commonweal halted here at noon for lunch. No provision for feeding the army was made by citizens and the hard tack and coffee had to be fallen back upon. Short speeches were made from the porch of the Exsley hotel by Coxey and Browne.

JOHN Y. McKANE.

The Second Attempt to Get Him Out of Prison.

NEW YORK, April 12.—For the second time within a few weeks Judge Lacombe, in the United States circuit court, has denied a motion for a writ of habeas corpus on behalf of John Y. McKane. This last motion, which was argued last Friday, was based on an alleged violation of chapter 766, of the United States revised statutes, which McKane's counsel held made it unlawful for any state to detain in prison a person convicted of a felony short of a capital offense, whose case has been appealed to a higher court. The case will be taken to the United States supreme court, where another motion for Mc Kane's release is set down for hearing today.

THE CHICAGO LOCKOUT.

A Lack of Harmony and It is Not Universal.

CHICAGO, April 12.—The lockout of the building trades, which occurred today, was not so general as was expected, not more than 10,000 men being thrown out of work. The boss builders claimed that 60,000 employes would be affected, but there was a lack of harmony among the employers and the lockout was not general. The workingmen claim that the movement is a complete failure and many of the boss builders are of the same opinion, but others say that the lockout will become general before the week is over.

DOUBLE MURDER.

Shot the Husband and Cut the Wife's Throat.

DENISON, Tex., April 12.—Near Collinsburg, this morning, Frank Crews, a farm hand, shot and mortally wounded his employer, Thomas Murrell, without warning. Mrs. Murrell rushed to her husband's assistance and Crews cut her throat, killing her instantly. The murderer escaped.

BARRING THE IMMORAL.

The New Albany Presbytery Stabs Colonel Breckinridge.

NEW ALBANY, Ind., April 12.—The New Albany presbytery, which has just adjourned, took action in the Breckinridge-Pollard scandal and adopted resolutions to be presented at the general assembly, which meets at Saratoga next May, asking that men of Breckinridge and immoral habits be excluded from the national councils.

HEROIC MEASURES.

Speaker Crisp Proposes to Put a Check to Filibustering.

A New Rule Governing the House Makes Refusal to Vote an Offense Punishable by a Fine.

WASHINGTON, April 12.—The democratic managers in the house today decided to take heroic measures to force the republicans to participate in the proceedings. The committee on rules, consisting of Speaker Crisp, Messrs. Outhwaite and Catchings, (democ.) and Messrs. Reed and Burrows, (repub.) held a meeting just before the house convened and formulated a rule to crush filibustering, making the penalty of failure to vote punishable by a fine. The republicans having cognizance of the rule by which their bonds were to be laid before the meeting of the house, Messrs. Reed and Burrows determined to contest every inch of the ground and a fierce parliamentary fight was immediately precipitated. Speaker Crisp, however, was in no humor for trifling and with a stern hand he swept aside all preliminaries and forced the fight on the main issue. As soon as the journal had been read he recognized Mr. Catchings from the committee on rules to present the report.

Mr. Burrows attempted to raise the point of order that no quorum was present, but the speaker held that the journal having been approved the point of order could not be made unless a vote upon some pending question Mr. Burrows then tried a flank movement with an appeal from the decision of the chair, but the speaker declared that he could not take Mr. Catchings off the floor for the purpose.

Mr. Reed came forward at this juncture and manifested a disposition to hold a joint debate with the chair, but the speaker declined the invitation and directed the clerk to read the report. Mr. Reed subsequently attempted to interrupt with appeals for recognition on a point of order, but the speaker with averted head refused to listen to him and Mr. Reed, finding his efforts futile, sank down in his chair. The report from the committee on rules was as follows:

To rescind clause 1 of rule VIII and insert in lieu thereof as follows: "Every member shall be present within the hall of the house during its sittings unless excused or unless excluded or entered and shall vote on each question put, unless he has a direct personal or pecuniary interest in the events of such question. Whenever in pursuance of section 3, article 1 of the constitution of the United States the house of representatives, at the request of one fifth of the members present, shall order the yeas and nays of its members on any question to be entered on its journals and upon a call of the roll of its members for the purpose of a quorum thereof shall fail to vote each member within the hall of the house who shall fail to respond when his name is called unless he has a direct personal and pecuniary interest in the event of such question, and each member who shall be absent from the hall of the house when his name is called, unless he has been excused or is necessarily prevented from being present, shall be fined the sum of $10 and the speaker shall cause an order of arrest to be made against such members on the journal of the house and the same shall be collected and paid into the treasury of the United States.

The yeas and nays were demanded. The republicans were determined to force the democrats to produce a quorum at every stage of the parliamentary proceedings looking to the adoption of the rule, and when the roll was called declined to vote. Eleven of the democrats refused to give the proposed rule their approval and voted against the demand for the previous question. The populists voted with the democrats in favor of the demand. The announcement of the vote 161 to 11 showed that the democrats were thirty seven short of a quorum. On motion of Mr. Catchings a call of the house was ordered.

At 2 o'clock the situation in the house was unchanged. Parliamentarily speaking it was tied in a double hard knot. During the proceedings to determine who the absentees were under the call of the house a motion was ascertained and a roll call was had on a motion to excuse Mr. Hull.

This motion may be followed by others of the same character until the names of all the absentees (over 100 in all) were exhausted. Each roll call consumes half an hour, so that the filibustering may be extended into the indefinite future. But although it was competent for the house, parliamentarily speaking, to dispense with further proceedings under the call at any juncture, it was necessary to complete the call for excuses before a resolution looking to the arrest of absentees could be prevented. Moreover, the resolution to arrest the absentees on March 19 was still in force, but as the absentees then were not the absentees today nothing could be accomplished under it. The situation was exceedingly complex and there is no prospect or possibility of solving it today. The democrats, however, say they will stand fast until the rule presented today is adopted.

THE IDEA OF SPERRY.

His Plan for Establishing a New Currency System.

It is a Modification, in Some Respects, of the Present National Banking Act—The Differences.

WASHINGTON, April 12.—Many plans have been presented during the present session of congress for a new currency system. Representative Sperry, of Connecticut, a member of the committee on banking and currency, introduced a currency bill yesterday to establish a bureau of issue state banks. It is a modification in some respects of the present national banking law. The essential points of difference between Mr. Sperry's plan and the present national banking act are the basis for circulation and the provisions for redemption of bank notes.

The bill authorizes a bank to deposit with the treasurer of the United States as security for circulation and interest-bearing bonds issued under due authority of law by the United States, or any state of the United States, or by any county or by any municipal corporation located within any such state.

It is provided that the comptroller shall pass upon the character of the bonds, and that they shall meet certain prescribed conditions. A bank having an authorized capital stock not exceeding $150,000 shall deposit bonds of par value of not less than one-fourth of the capital stock, and larger banks shall deposit not less than $50,000.

The United States does not guarantee the circulating notes, as under the national banking act, but holds the bonds as collateral security and is authorized to sell them if the bank goes into liquidation at what they will bring. The notes, however, shall constitute a first and paramount lien upon all the assets of the bank.

The provisions for redemption require redemption in legal tender United States coin on the presentation of the notes and also require a reserve of twenty five per cent of deposits in lawful money of the United States. A central redemption agency is established in the office of the comptroller of the currency and the banks are required to keep their 5 per cent of their outstanding circulation for the redemption of notes which may drift too far from the locality where the bank is established in the presented for redemption at its rate on bonds. This redemption fund differs from that under existing law by being required to be kept in coin instead of lawful money.

Mr. Sperry makes no provisions for a safety fund, but leaves each bank to stand upon its own bottom and to redeem its notes as per by presentation for redemption in coin and by the securities in the custody of the treasurer of the United States. No distinction is made in the money of redemption between gold and silver legal tender coin, but there is a separate section of the bill authorizing the establishment of gold banks which deposit bonds, par value, principal and interest, in gold and make their notes redeemable exclusively gold. Provision is also made for the transition of existing banks, both state and national, into the new system.

ADDS ZEST TO A DIVORCE CASE.

Indiana Man is Sued for Alienating a Wife's Affections.

VALPARAISO, Ind., April 12.—Rochester society is all torn up over a damage suit filed by John Sullivan, of this city, against Valentine Zimmerman, jr., son of Valentine Zimmerman, a wealthy democratic politician of northern Indiana. A few weeks ago, after a tour of the leading cities at the head of a Wild West show, Mrs. Sullivan came here and packed up all the household goods and went to Rochester, where her parents reside, and entered a suit for a divorce and $2,000 alimony. During her stay there she organized a theatrical company composed of the swell young people of the burg, and young Zimmerman was one of the leading lights of the company. Yesterday Sullivan filed suit in the circuit court against young Zimmerman in which $10,000 damages are demanded for the alienating of Mrs. Sullivan's affections from their honest domain. The evidence which will be brought into the trial promises to be very sensational. Sullivan fairly worships his wife and will fight her suit for a divorce. He secured a restraining order last night and put back the property and the custody of the two children.

MRS. STEVENSON AND PARTY.

Vice President's Family Will Remain in Bloomington a Month.

BLOOMINGTON, Ill., April 12.—Mrs. Adlai Stevenson, her daughter, Mrs. Julia; Miss Green, of Danville, Ky., and Mrs. Matthew T. Scott, Mrs. Stevenson's sister, arrived here yesterday morning from Washington, and all excepting Mrs. Scott, who returns to Washington in a few days, will remain here a month or so longer, recuperating and enjoying the society of old friends. As the Stevenson homestead has been leased and is occupied by a tenant, the party have taken a suite of rooms at a hotel.

SHORT IN HIS ACCOUNTS.

Trusts the Business to His Deputy, Who Loses the Money at Cards.

SULLIVAN, Ind., April 12.—This community was astonished yesterday by the fact becoming known that James H. Claggage, late postmaster at this place, was short in his accounts with the government. A few weeks ago the office was turned over to a new postmaster, and the work of an inspector recently made the fact apparent that there was a shortage of between $700 and $800. It appears that Claggage left the management of the business of the office largely in the hands of his deputy, Ed C. Isaacs. It is said that he charged Isaacs with the shortage, who acknowledged the fact and confessed that he had lost it gambling. Claggage has a bond to indemnify him, which is perfectly good.

MAJOR BEN'S ELOQUENCE

Was the Chief Feature in the Pollard Case Today.

He Reviews the Testimony and Particularly That Part of It Referring to Mr. Rhodes.

WASHINGTON, April 12.—Major Ben Butterworth had the floor again when the Pollard-Breckinridge case was resumed today. He began with the condemnation of Miss Pollard's letters to James Rhodes, which he said, were the foundation of the case. He did not care anything about the top, he said, if there was no foundation for it to rest upon.

After reading some of those letters at length he came to the ones which were dated in New Orleans and which she had sent to Cincinnati and which she sent to her mother to mail to Rhodes. He laid great stress on these transactions, declaring that there was a great mystery surrounding the letters, and exclaimed:

"There is one human being alive and well who could clear up the mystery of those letters. That is the mother who gave birth to this woman, and she is not called. That woman is alive and well in Kentucky, and she is not called. They may ask why we did not call her, but we do not go into the enemy's camp for soldiers and ammunition."

He dealt particularly on Miss Pollard's demands for money from Rhodes, and when he came to an allusion to one of the letters to her great enjoyment at reading Washington Irving, Mr. Wilson said:

"Give me the Washington Irving letter, please."

In addition to reading the letters Mr. Butterworth consumed much time threshing over the testimony of Miss Pollard from the record and pointing out a few discrepancies on minor points.

TRAINS COLLIDE.

A Bad Wreck on the New Haven Railroad.

NEW YORK, April 12.—The Washington express on the New Haven railroad ran into a freight train at Port Chester while running at a high rate of speed. The passenger train consisted of seven cars, including three sleepers. The freight cars took fire and three of them were burned. Conductor St. Clair and Brakeman Kennedy, of the freight train, were injured.

The passengers on board of the express train received a fierce shaking up, but none of them were injured. Those in the sleepers ran out of the cars without waiting to dress, but finding that there was no immediate danger, they returned to the sleepers and dressed themselves.

The village fire companies confined the fire to three freight cars. It was the hot coals from the furnace of the wrecked locomotive of the express that set fire to the freight cars. The engineer and fireman had a miraculous escape and came out of the wreck with a few bruises. The switchman who caused the wreck by setting the wrong switch has been suspended.

COUNTERFEITERS CAPTURED.

Plates and Material Will be Used in Evidence Against Them.

LAFAYETTE, Ind., April 12.—Two more alleged counterfeiters were arrested today and taken to Indianapolis, in the residence recently occupied by Joseph Bonardi, in Washington township, a large quantity of stuff used in making the counterfeits was found today. It consisted of chloride of gold, acids, silver in bulk, blank bills, etc., enough to make about $500 worth of the queer stuff. A number of counterfeit nickels, half made $5 gold pieces and silver dollars were in the collection. The final arrests will be made in Indianapolis to be used as evidence.

It is rumored that new and even more startling developments will soon be given out.

Christian J. Olinger, the popular proprietor of the Richland livery stable, on East Main street, is wearing an unusually pleasant smile today, on account of the arrival at his home of a bouncing baby boy, and in honor of the event he is treating his many friends to fine cigars and free back rides about the city.

PROTECTION OF CITY WATER.

Professor Johnson Says Agitation and Experiments Are Not Pressing.

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., April 12.—The conference of state and county health authorities opened with a paper by Professor Johnson, of Franklin college, on "How Shall We Protect Our Water Supply?" The speaker, in referring to the various sources of contamination by cemeteries, vaults and the oil results to the health of cities therefrom, declared that agitation and exposure to air of water thus contaminated do not purify it. In the discussion of the paper Dr. Scott, secretary of the Illinois board, said that he would like to have more light on that branch of the subject, for, if it were true that agitation and exposure do not purify, the city of Chicago is spending a great deal of money to no purpose. The question, however, dropped out of sight without any satisfactory expression from the members of the conference. Last evening Governor Matthews addressed the conference in a few remarks, welcoming its members to the city, and Dr. Hibberd spoke in behalf of the state board of health, of which he is a member. Dr. Scott, of the Illinois state board of health, read a paper on "General Sanitation," which was listened to with great interest and discussed at its close.

DR. MEYER AGAIN.

His Case Removed in the New York Courts.

NEW YORK, April 12.—The trial of Dr. Henry C. O. Meyer, charged with poisoning Ludwig Brandt in order to secure insurance money, which on December last was interrupted near its conclusion by the sudden insanity of the juror, A. T. Low, was begun again today before Recorder Smythe. According to the counsel for the defense, more than a week will probably be consumed in getting a jury.

Not Anarchists.

PARIS, April 12.—An investigation into the explosion of a bomb in front of the house of the justice of the peace at Argenteuil shows that it was not the work of anarchists, as at first supposed, but that it was the result of a stupid practical joke upon the part of the justice's son.

FRIGHTENED AWAY.

Too Many Armed Deputies to Suit the Strikers.

The Latter Leave, Vowing They Will Return Loaded Strong and Attack the Workmen.

CONNELLSVILLE, Pa., April 12.—A mob of 500 strikers assembled at Dunbar before daylight with the avowed intention of forcing the workmen out at the Hill Farm works, but the show of force made by the deputies frightened the strikers off, and they left for reinforcements, moving in the direction of Mt. Braddock. It was given out by some of the strikers that they would return to the Hill Farm and attack the deputies and men at work as soon as they could augment their force to 800 or 1,000 by men from Trotter and Mt. Braddock.

There is no disturbance at the works in this vicinity, though the strikers are making threatening demonstrations at Trotter and Adelaide. The operators are fully prepared for any emergency. A large number of deputies were sworn in at Trotter and Leisenring. Nos 1 and 3, last night, by Deputy Sheriff Richards. The deputies were also taken from the Davidson works to Trotter and the Leisenrings. At Leonard, a large crowd of Hungarian women assembled today, and, with clubs and stones, drove off the workmen.

Three of Brooklyn's Business Men Missing.

They Started Out in a Yacht Just Before the Storm Broke and Never Returned.

Jones' Inlet, the outlet from the bay, has been the scene of many wrecks. Breaking parties have not been able to find any trace of the boat or men. Daniel DeMott, superintendent of the saw mills at Rockville Center, L. I., and his son, Robert, who sailed excursion in their yacht before the storm began, are missing. It is thought they were caught outside by the gale and that both have been drowned. Three duck hunters started out on Monday afternoon for Freeport, Long Island, and have not been heard from since. It is believed that they may have been drowned. It is reported that a large sloop yacht was sunk in the storm in the sound, near Bridgeport.

I am in the congressional race to the bitter end. I am not going to lie on the defensive but am going to make an aggressive fight."

BOY ABDUCTED.

Jacob Weber, Aged Fourteen, Missing Since Sunday.

His Parents are Frantic Over Their Loss—The Father Spends All His Time in the Search.

Joseph Weber, a well-known huckster living on New Haven avenue, east of this city, called at The Sentinel office this morning and told a strange story of the abduction of Jacob, his fourteen year old son. The boy was last seen on Sunday, the 8th, in the evening of that day his father sent him to the front yard to close the gate. Jacob did not return and his parents became very uneasy. It was thought that the lad had gone to visit one of the neighbors and had concluded to stay all night, as the weather was bad Next morning, however, Jacob did not return and the father and mother became half frantic. A search was immediately instituted but no traces of the lost boy could be found. The father went to the school for feeble minded, the poor house and visited all the parochial schools in the city but could get no trace of the little fellow.

Yesterday, however, he got some word of the boy and sensational circumstances were developed. Mr. Weber discovered that a Fort Wayne man living on Gay street had been seen on New Haven avenue on the night the boy disappeared and that Jacob spent the night in this city with him. The lad was next tracked to Bloomingdale and from there all traces of him have been lost.

Speaking of the abduction, Mr. Weber said: "Jacob has been stolen from me and I am just now beginning to see the motive. I have always treated him well and indulged him in every way. The boy is very bright and learns readily. I have been keeping him at school and intended to make him a minister or a professional man. We would have gone to the high school this fall and eventually to college and for the past few months has been taking instructions from a well known minister in this city. The only motive I can attribute to the abduction of my boy is that some enemy of mine who knows how ambitious I am for Jacob has stolen him away in order to raise him differently. I have done nothing but hunt for him for the past four days and have asked every farmer I have met if they have seen anything of my boy. When the lad was stolen from me he had on a brown pair of pants, a white shirt without a collar, a black fur cap and button shoes. He also had on an old grey coat. I have no other son and both boys have been given only the kindest treatment. I do not intend to let this matter rest until I have recovered my son and brought the man to justice who stole him from me."

The whole circumstance is very peculiar and much remains yet to be told. The police have been notified.

MEXICAN DOLLARS.

Steps to Prevent Their Introduction Into Philippine Islands.

WASHINGTON, April 12.—Our consular agent at Iloilo, Philippine Islands, reports that the Spanish authorities there are taking steps to prevent the circulation of Mexican silver dollars coming into the islands. If these dollars are of date previous to 1873 it circulates locally as a Spanish coin. So the government has made a decree that upon arrival at the islands, captains of vessels must declare what amount of foreign silver coin they have aboard. The Chinese banks they have aboard. Failing such declaration the coin, if found, will be confiscated, re-coined, and its value paid to the informers and custom officials.

GOOD BASE BALL.

Grand Rapids and Fort Wayne Mixes Entertain the Crowds.

Despite the disagreeable weather of yesterday quite a good crowd of lovers of base ball went to Lakeside to witness the game between the Grand Rapids and home nines. The game was called at 4 o'clock and Fort Wayne took the bat. Six innings were played and the score resulting was eleven to nothing, in favor of the visitors. The Grand Rapids team is composed of some fine players and the home nine did good work in holding them down as well as they did. A feature of the business playing was Holland's running catch in last field. Grand Rapids made six runs in the first inning off Gaffney, pitcher for Fort Wayne. After this Gaffney had pitched one inning "Chic" Stoll was put in his place. In the first inning Fort Wayne put three men on base. Our boys batted like professionals but failed to put the ball safe to the good fielding of the out club keeping them from scoring. Fort Wayne had men on bases at every inning except one, but failed to get ahead at the proper time to bring the men home.

A game between the same nines is in progress this afternoon.

WORKS TO PERFECTION.

The New Garbage Crematory Tested This Morning.

Seven Tons of Filth Reduced to a Few Shovelfuls of Ashes in an Hour's Time.

The question of properly disposing of the city's garbage has long been a difficult one for Fort Wayne authorities to solve. To the late Mayor Zollinger was largely due the credit of securing a new system—that of incineration—and for that purpose a New York company was awarded the contract of erecting a crematory near this city and giving our citizens an opportunity of witnessing the total destruction of the city's filth.

The site of the new crematory is just beyond and to the right of the Clinton street bridge over the St. Mary's river. This morning the first genuine test of its working was made in the presence of prominent citizens and the following officials: Mayor Scherer, Councilmen Myers, Eggeman, McClelland, and ex-Councilman Michaels, Marshal Franks and Street Commissioner Mungen.

Some seven tons of the very worst, sloppy garbage which could be gathered was hauled up to the crematory hopper and dumped in. The heavy blasts of flame were then turned on and in about an hour's time the entire seven tons of filthy refuse was reduced to a handful or so of very dry, clean ashes. The crematory worked to perfection and there was no odor perceptible after the garbage had been placed in the retorts.

The only objection which the committee had to the crematory was the wagon approach, which was too steep, as the four horses nearly stalled in climbing it. This objection can, however, be readily remedied.

The total cost of the new crematory is about $8,000, and the company is to give it a six months' test.

Will be Continued.

STANDARD time is going along all right.

AT THE meeting of the city council tomorrow night the improvement ball should be started to rolling.

THE five weeks drouth in England, Germany, France, Austria and Poland is causing much uneasiness to farmers in those countries.

EVERY tramp arriving at Elkhart is first vaccinated, after which he is given a lunch, neatly wrapped in paper, by a hotel in that city, which charges the city 15 cents for every lunch prepared. A policeman then escorts the tramp to the corporation line and he is bidden to move on.

REPRESENTATIVE MCRAE, of Arkansas, has introduced in congress a bill to regulate the compensation of marshals, attorneys and commissioners of the United States. It fixes the compensation of such officers at $4 000 per annum, while the clerks of courts are to be paid by fee as now.

JUDGING from the feeling among the democrats throughout the city it would be well for the members of the executive committee of the democratic city central committee, the self-constituted canvassing board in the mayoralty count, to resign, and the sooner the better for the good of the party.

BUILDING improvements are being made in different parts of the city, and, although there is no boom, a good deal of work is being done, and the outlook for labor is much more encouraging than it was a few weeks ago. When the contemplated public improvements have been commenced many of our workmen who have been out of employment will be kept busy and a more cheerful state of affairs will prevail in business circles.

THE candidates for the various county offices before the democratic county convention are doing quiet but effective work, not only in the city, but throughout the country districts, and the canvass is warming up. The excitement over our city primaries and city election makes it hard work for the candidates, but in the country the voters are discussing county politics considerably. The democratic county convention will be held in this city on the 2d day of June.

POSTMASTER GENERAL BISSELL has issued an order providing that hereafter only short names or names of one word only shall be accepted for newly established postoffices. Exception may be made by the department when the name is historical or has become local by long usage. Satisfactory reasons must be presented to the department for changing of postoffice names. The postmaster-general says that the rule will remove a source of annoyance to the department and of injury to the postal service.

THE Hendricks club held a meeting last night at the rooms of the democratic city central committee for the purpose of preparing for the city election campaign. Dr. W. W. Mungen presided and, after hearing the minutes of the last meeting and the report of the committee of constitution and by-laws, on motion of Mr. A. I. Friend, a committee of ten members was appointed to meet with a citizens' committee, to be organized this evening. The president appointed the following committee to meet with the citizens: H. C. Berghoff, Frank Whitney, Louis Jocquel, E. H. Baker, J. Bobilya, L. Huser, H. M. Diehl, William T. Mannix, Louis Cantilere and W. C. Easde.

THE newspapers of the country are beginning to clamor again for popular election of senators. The Chicago Herald declares vigorously that "the performances during the past winter of such alleged democrats in the United States senate as Hill, of New York; McPherson, of New Jersey; Gorman, of Maryland, and Brice, of Ohio, have had the effect to arouse general opposition to the caucus system of electing United States senators." It is interesting to note that on the very day Mr. Hill declares pompously "I am a democrat and I follow Jefferson," the Minnesota democracy calls him a Benedict Arnold, and the leading democratic paper of Illinois and the west dubs him a traitor to his party.

THE death of Dr. Jenks, of Washington university, St. Louis, from a wound received in dissection, calls to mind one of the constant perils of the medical profession, which no precaution seems to be able to avert, and which has cost many a surgeon his life. The palm awarded the soldier for bravery belongs equally to the doctor, who, going forth to save life instead of destroying it, braves contagion, the poisoned air, all that causes disease and death and even the accidental stroke of his own knife. The medical man faces dangers all the more fearful because unseen and unavoidable, which may not be made out in advance and from which there is no retreat. The professional soldier spends years in peace, waiting for the approach of war, which, while terrible, may be brief; but the doctor engages in a warfare which is perpetual, a labor which has no respite, and faces an ever present danger.

British Political Parties.

Justin McCarthy tells us in The North American Review that when he first became acquainted with the house of commons there were only two parties there—Liberals and Tories. The Liberals were beginning to divide into Whigs and and Radicals. Now Liberals and Tories face each other still, but besides these there are also the Irish party, the Scotch party, the Welsh party, the labor party, the woman suffrage party, the temperance party and the colonial party, all already more or less influential and gaining in power. The Scotch and Welsh parties are an outgrowth of the Irish party and are aiming for exactly what that organization demands—home rule. They will ultimately be satisfied with nothing less.

The Labor party is perhaps more rapidly growing than any other. Mr. McCarthy borrows an Americanism and says, "Clearly the principle of labor representation has caught on." The leader of the party in the commons is John Burns. McCarthy's description of this famous leader sounds like an eloquent bit from one of the novelist's stories:

I have great admiration and respect for Mr. John Burns and a firm belief in him. He has about him the charm of a strong, self reliant manhood. He is above all things a man. You can see this in his dark, soft, gleaming eyes. They are eyes which invite confidence. John Burns is a working engineer who has led a toiler's life, afloat and ashore and under various conditions. He has worked along those mysterious African rivers which are associated in the minds of most of us with the explorings of Stanley and of Emin Pasha. He has worked in London shops and yards. He is a fine and a powerful speaker and can control a vast meeting of workingmen with irresistible force. He is a great democratic influence, and political parties and social organizations can hardly reckon without him. He seldom speaks in the house of commons, but when he does speak he speaks well and goes straight to the point. He never speaks but on some subject which he thoroughly understands, and about which he has something important and direct to say. He has a fine and even thrilling voice, and one always feels that some day when his time comes and his own question is uppermost he will make a great speech.

Shall the State Give Men Work?

This question is actually soon to be decided by the referendum in Switzerland. Thus far has state socialism, or nationalism, as its adherents in America call it, progressed in Europe.

Socialists declare it makes a great difference how one looks at this question. It is recognized among civilized nations that the state must give alms; hence our vast array of poorhouses and charity refuges. The advocates of the state labor idea say if the state owes charity to its indigent citizens, then it also owes the labor which will keep them from becoming objects of charity.

Some nice questions of both logic and ethics are involved here. The Swiss socialists declare, further, that the labor given by the state must not be considered at all as an alms. That was how Bismarck looked at it in his famous move for state employment, but that is all wrong, these advanced thinkers affirm. The proffered labor from the state is the "right" of the citizen.

In the way of the practical execution of their plans, in the extremely improbable case of the adoption by Switzerland of the state labor idea, the advocates of it would begin by providing state employment bureaus and labor bourses. But the issue to which all these ideas will come sooner or later is this, Shall the state take hold of the great industries of the country and run them itself, employing workmen and distributing the fruit of all labor as equitably as may be?

The movement for an international conference set on foot by the United Textile workers of Great Britain may result in much good. It is coming to be understood that the more friendly terms the people of different nations can be on the better it is for the prosperity of all. War to the knife and a deadly rivalry between two competing railways or business firms result in loss, often ruin to both. The law is the same for the individual workers of these nations. Different circumstances and conditions cause different wage rates and hours of labor in two countries, as in England and America, but that is really no reason why the textile workers of England and America should be at swords' points. Both may thrive or suffer in their own country and still not be enemies. They will be much better off as friends. This the human race begins to understand. The international conference of textile workers is an advance step in civilization. Its meetings will be occupied in discussing wages, hours of work, child labor and the best method of promoting international federation.

A remarkable optical telescope has been devised. By means of it an oculist can look into a patient's eyes and learn with absolute certainty the degree to which the sight is affected. A small telescope has a disk with letters and figures upon it affixed to its object end. A powerful light is thrown upon this disk. The patient looks at it, and of course the letters and figures are pictured upon his retina. The oculist looks through the telescope and by means of the powerful light can see entirely through the patient's eye and perceive the letters upon the retina. The manner in which they are thrown there shows exactly whether there is anything wrong with the patient's eyes and what it is.

A New York paper suggests that in view of the unprotected situation of virtuous and innocent middle aged congressmen they should never be permitted abroad without chaperons to save them from wicked schoolgirls who walk abroad to abduct and ruin them.

The surplus in American banks is much larger than it was a year ago. In New York city it is $70,000,000 more than it was then. But it is not a bit easier to borrow $5 than it was in 1893. Lenders of money are so scary that they will not trust it on any of the securities that in ordinary times pass as good. Doubled and twisted security is now demanded.

LOOKS LIKE A GRECIAN.

But Miss Bond Is an American and Is Descended From George Washington.

The effectiveness of the old Greek costume was never better illustrated than when it was adopted by Miss Mary Carolina Bond, a New Jersey belle of surpassing beauty, who is creating a sensation in New York society circles, as well as in those of Elizabeth, where she resides. It is hard to decide whether the Greek gown, which is a favorite with its fair wearer, really enhances her beauty or is rendered more attractive thereby, but certainly beauty and gown complement each other in a manner that is simply bewitching. Some good sculptor ought to embody them in a statue.

MISS MARY C. BOND.

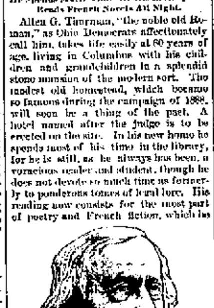

Miss Bond is tall, with a finely molded figure and remarkably graceful in her movements. Her hair is reddish golden in color, and with it are the clear blue eyes belonging to that type of beauty and a complexion of exquisite coloring. She is bright and witty, a brilliant conversationalist, an accomplished musician and charming and lovable in disposition.

Miss Bond has other than mere personal claims to consideration, however. She is a great-great-grandniece of George Washington and a great-grandniece of the famous Dolly Madison, with some of whose historic beauty she seems to have been dowered.

ALLEN G. THURMAN'S OLD AGE.

He Spends Much Time In His Library and Reads French Novels All Night.

Allen G. Thurman, "the noble old Roman," as Ohio Democrats affectionately call him, takes life easily at 80 years of age, living in Columbus with his children and grandchildren in a splendid stone mansion of the modern sort. The modest old homestead, which became so famous during the campaign of 1888, will soon be a thing of the past. A hotel named after the judge is to be erected on the site. In his new home he spends most of his time in the library, for he is still, as he always has been, a voracious reader and student, though he does not devote so much time as formerly to ponderous tomes of legal lore. His reading now consists for the most part of poetry and French fiction, which he reads in the original. He takes a daily glance at the pages of The Congressional Record, however, thus keeping in touch with the doings of our national legislators.

Judge Thurman has always led as secluded a life as is possible for a man so greatly interested in public affairs, and since the death of his wife two years ago he has been more secluded than ever. He is not by any means unapproachable, though he never receives visitors during the day. His habit is to receive callers and chat with the family after dinner every evening, and then after 10 o'clock he begins his reading. If his book is interesting, he reads all night, and very often the morning sun is shining through the windows when he lays down the volume in which he has been absorbed. During the day he sleeps. He has no regular hour for going to bed and none for getting up, but follows the bent of his inclinations in the matter of rest.

The judge is a very wealthy man. His wife was rich when they were married, and her estate has been well managed and greatly increased. His household now consists of the family of his son, Allen W. Thurman, who married a Baltimore belle of famous beauty. The young folks, who are extremely devoted to the grandfather, are prominent in the social circles of Columbus, and the family ranks high in the genuine aristocracy of the state.

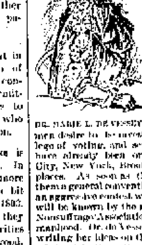

A Swiss Colony.

There is a Swiss colony in Grundy county, Tenn., which seems like a part of a foreign country, so perfectly have they kept up their native habits and customs and even style of architecture in the building of their little cottages. There are carvers there whose quaint work finds ready sale. Market gardening is a feature of the colony, and those who can talk English take the produce to the towns and sell it. Their wines have taken several premiums, and it is a rare treat to go through their well kept vineyards. One of the remarkable phases of life there is the great age to which they attain, there being several centenarians among them and nonagenarians not being at all uncommon. The mountains surrounding them, while not so high or grand as their native Alps, are sufficiently steep to keep them from feeling lonely for the sight of their native hills, and none of them has ever returned to Switzerland, although a number of them have grown quite wealthy and could go if they wished.

AGAINST WOMAN SUFFRAGE.

The Novel Crusade Undertaken by Dr. Marie L. de Vessey.

Dr. Marie L. de Vessey of Jersey City has started what she hopes will be a national crusade against woman suffrage. Her purpose seems decidedly novel in these times, when every woman who takes an interest in public affairs is supposed to be an "equal suffragist," as they prefer to be called nowadays, but Dr. de Vessey is in earnest and goes about her work in a vigorous manner. Her method is to organize clubs to combat the idea that women desire to be invested with the privilege of voting, and several of these clubs have already been organized in Jersey City, New York, Brooklyn and adjacent places. As soon as there are enough of them a general convention will be held, and an aggressive contest will begin. The clubs will be known by the general name of the Nonsuffrage Association of American Womanhood. Dr. de Vessey thus sets forth in writing her ideas on the subject:

Let us take the entire situation in concerning woman and universal suffrage. Would not universal suffrage give woman many more responsibilities than today lurk in her range or circumstances? Would not the real merit of woman be depreciated by giving her the ballot with which to exercise the rights of state? Would not woman be made more masculine, wherein her more feminine nature and the pure, simple love would vanish from her bosom? Would not she grow more avaricious, vain and domineering, thereby losing the sorts of refined beauty which truly belongs to woman?

Look at this question with the utmost seriousness. By woman taking the same, under circumstances, to head, for responsibilities increase, man virtually loses the favor which his godlike spirit creates within her to make him the fetish in the temple of science. Woman should not grow so eagerly ambitious as to annihilate her dignity, the principle which virtually belongs to her life, making her only, as to desire to take out of the temple all of the fetish, which most undoubtedly will cause a decline as soon as it is placed in execution by woman's universal suffrage.

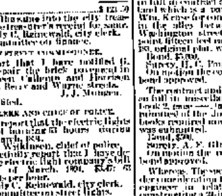

Opposition to woman suffrage is not a new thing with Dr. de Vessey. Ten or twelve years ago she began her work against it, during the great agitation of that period in its favor, but did not make herself especially prominent. Now she has decided that the time is ripe for more vigorous fighting, and she will not shrink from the ordeal.

Dr. de Vessey is a rather picturesque looking woman. She wears loose garments, and a woman writer naively says that "upon first sight most people would think her an advocate of suffrage."

THE FIRST STEEL SAILING SHIP.

The Dirigo Is a Credit to Her Builders and Her Flag.

In their great shipyards at Bath, Me., Arthur Sewall & Co., the builders of those famous wooden vessels, the Susquehanna, Shenandoah and Roanoke, recently launched the first steel sailing ship built in this country and christened her the Dirigo, after the Latin motto of the state, which means "I direct." The Dirigo is a square rigged four master and will carry an area of about 12,000 yards of canvas. She is designed for the foreign carrying trade and will accommodate 4,500 tons of freight. She is now being fitted up in New York, and when ready will load for her first voyage to San Francisco.

One may get some idea of her immense size from the fact that she carries 1,000 tons of sand as ballast. Her dimensions are: Length, 312 feet; breadth, 45.15 feet; depth, 25.6 feet; gross tonnage, 3,004.80; net tonnage, 2,855.10. She has a flush main deck of steel fore and aft, sheathed with 3", inch hard pine. The lower deck has steel stringers and tie plates, planked with 2 inch hard pine.

Forward is a high topgallant forecastle, and aft is a turtle deck poop, containing saloon, captain's room, bath and trunk room on the starboard side, the officers' and spare rooms, medicine room, pantry and messroom being on the port side. The cabin is not the usual teak cabin, but is made after a new design and is prettily finished in quartered oak and handsomely furnished.

The vessel is steered by a new screw steering gear, the wheelman being protected by a hood of steel, open on the forward end. A flying bridge connects the poop with the topgallant forecastle for convenience in foul weather. The bowsprit is all one piece, 67 feet long. The lower masts are one piece of steel. The lower yards measure 92 feet, and the rigging is of wire throughout. She carries for anchors two bowers, weighing 6,250 pounds each, a stream, a kedge and a spare anchor. Two large cranes take the place of the usual catheads.

The Dirigo is commanded by Captain George W. Goodwin, who for 18 years had command of the ship Sterling, built by the Sewalls in 1875. She has a crew of 24 men, three mates, two boatswains, cook, steward, carpenter, engineer and four boys.

France Is Larger Than She Thought.

Frenchmen are elated just now by the discovery that their country is about 8,000 square kilometers bigger than has hitherto been supposed to be the case. Several years ago a Russian general caused a sensation by announcing that the areas of most of the countries of Europe differed widely from the official and declared figures, the greatest divergencies being in the cases of France and Italy.

Pig and Dog Lie Down Together.

David Dice of Hamilton, Pa., has a pig and a shepherd dog which have become steadfast friends. They play together and eat out of the same trough and at the same time. When bedtime comes, both nest themselves in a box which is 20 by 23, both using the same pillow, as would good bedfellows, without quarreling about the nest.

He Had to Go.

"Speaking about the peculiar uses to which alarm clocks have been put," said a gentleman yesterday, "I know of none more ridiculous than a case that I witnessed. There are several of us, all friends, who join in a little game of poker now and then. The game usually becomes more interesting than we expect, so all limitations of time are set aside. It was all very well for us unmarried fellows to get home at 4 o'clock in the morning, but one of the number had a little wife waiting patiently for him, and while she was not opposed to her husband having a friendly game of poker occasionally she did object strenuously to his coming home at such hours, believing in moderation in all things.

"The other night we were all deeply interested in a 'jack pot,' which had attained respectable proportions, when suddenly we were surprised by a continual ringing of a bell, the sound apparently coming from our married friend's pocket. He threw down his hand with a laugh, and delving into his coat pocket produced a small alarm clock. We looked on in amazement, but our Benedict friend was convulsed with laughter. Finally the bell stopped ringing, and he said: 'Boys, I forgot to tell you about it. I tried to explain to my wife how the great interest I took in the game always made me forgetful of time as an excuse for my late home coming, when to my surprise she said, "Well, George, if you can't remember when it's time to come home, I've got a way to remind you of it." She said nothing more, but when I left the house this evening she put this alarm clock in my pocket, saying: "George, I've set it for half past 1. I think that's late enough for any man, so there is no excuse tonight."' Of course we all joined in the laugh, but it did not last long, for George got up from the table, saying: 'Well, boys, I'll have to be off. There's no excuse tonight.'

"Inasmuch as George was in $75 on the game, this information caused all our faces to grow long. But George went, notwithstanding our strong appeals for him to stay. When we were left alone, we passed our views upon a wife who could invent such a scheme as that, especially when her husband was winning."—Pittsburg Dispatch.

Settled the Difficulty.

He had given her the engagement ring and was telling her fairy stories about the trouble he had experienced in securing a pure white, flawless stone when he saw a sad look creep into the eyes but now fired with joyous mirth and gladness.

"What is it, my own?" he whispered in her left auricular appendage.

"Oh, Harold, suppose"——

"Yes, sweetheart."

"Suppose we should get married?"

"We will, my dearest," he lisped, with a $10 a week nerve.

"And I should lose this ring in the fluff of our velvet carpets?"

For a moment he was dazed. Then a decorative possibility rushed athwart his prophetic soul, and he said firmly:

"We will have hard wood floors."—Detroit Free Press.

Charley Taylor Receives Painful Injuries—An Inspection Party—News of the Shops.

A most shocking suicide occurred at Lima, Ohio, yesterday morning. The man was John Brooks, a boilermaker, who had lived at Lima many years, and the cause of the rash deed is attributed to domestic troubles and despondency on account of being out of work. The story of the suicide as told THE SENTINEL representative by one of the trainmen who witnessed the shocking affair is as follows:

No. 4, the east bound Pittsburg passenger train, was hauled by engine No 310, with Engineer David Rady and Fireman Andy Miller in charge. As the train was approaching Lima and when about one-half mile west of the station, a man was seen walking along the road, just outside the rails, on the north side. When the train was perhaps within 300 feet of him he stopped and faced the engine, standing so near the rails that Engineer Rady sounded the whistle to warn the man of his danger. Instead of stepping back, beyond the reach of the train, Brooks deliberately laid down on the track, took hold of the rails and with his head raised and eyes riveted upon the horrified features of Fireman Miller, awaited death. He did not have long to wait. A second later the pilot struck him and the engine and four cars passed over his body. When Engineer Rady became aware of the fellow's intentions he reversed the lever, put on the air brakes and did everything in his power to stop the train, but all in vain. When the trainmen removed the bleeding body from beneath the cars it was found that a deep gash had been cut in the forehead, the right arm broken in several places, the left arm lacerated and broken between the elbow and the wrist, the left leg cut off between the knee and ankle, the bottom of the right foot cut off, and the bones crushed. Brooks was alive and conscious. He was made as comfortable as possible until a switch engine and a car ran down from the Lima yards, when he was picked up and taken down to an undertaking establishment, where both legs were amputated. The man remained conscious during the painful operation and when the surgeons had completed their tasks the poor fellow raised the stumps of his limbs up so he could see them and made some remark which the attendants did not distinctly hear. He died at 11:20, having lived just three hours and fifty minutes after the train struck him. John Brooks was thirty-nine years old. He was married but had separated from his wife. The woman was notified of the horrible affair and when her husband was dead she went to the undertaking rooms and viewed the remains in a very unconcerned manner.

Forty per cent. of the business of the railways of France is passenger traffic. The six great railroad companies of that country were operated in 1893 on 53.14 per cent. of the gross earnings. In this country the average is 64 per cent. The roads earned an average, gross, of $10,693, and $5,159 net per mile operated for the year 1893. The six roads own 9,051 locomotives, 21,565 passenger cars and 244,382 freight cars.

Charles Taylor, machinist at the Bass works, had his right hand frightfully injured yesterday. While boring out and fitting an engine cross-head to the piston rod his hand was caught in the machinery in such a manner as to almost tear the thumb out. A cut laying the bones bare extended from the wrist down the back and side of the hand and between the thumb and index finger which required thirteen stitches to close. Dr. McCausland was called to the shop and dressed the wounded hand. No bones were broken but some of the tendons were torn from their fastenings.

DO YOU OVERWORK?

Do You Get Exhausted and Irritable?

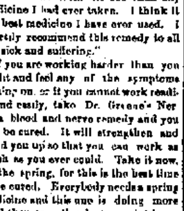

Such Conditions Mean Much More Than You Think.

How to Do the Most and Best Work Without Getting Tired.

People are ambitious, they want to better their condition and to have the good things of life. To do this they overwork and put too great a strain on their strength and nerves. In consequence, the nerves become weakened and the person soon loses the power to work as much as formerly.

When the nerves are weak, the heart also becomes weakened. Severe heart disease is liable to follow if this condition is not checked. Weak heart causes poor circulation, indigestion and many other troubles. It is a dangerous condition to neglect. The following letter written by Mr. W. A. Phillips, of Moretown, Vt., gives some interesting information:

"I have been troubled with heart disease and indigestion, not being able to do a full day's work for some time. I employed physicians and used many remedies, but was not benefitted by them. I have seen days in the last few months when I would have given anything to be able to do a good day's work.

MR. W. A. PHILLIPS.

"I finally commenced using Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy, and in a short time derived more benefit from its use than any medicine I had ever taken. I think it the best medicine I have ever used. I heartily recommend this remedy to all the sick and suffering."

If you are working harder than you ought and feel any of the symptoms coming on, or if you cannot work readily and easily, take Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy and you will be cured. It will strengthen and build you up so that you can work as much as you ever could. Take it now, in the spring, for this is the best time to be cured. Everybody needs a spring medicine and this one is doing more good than any other known remedy.

It is purely vegetable and harmless. Dr. Greene, its discoverer, is the most successful specialist in curing nervous and chronic diseases. He can be consulted at his office, 35 West 14th street, New York City, free, personally or by letter.

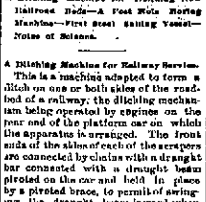

WORLD'S PROGRESS.

NEW MECHANICAL INVENTIONS FOR PROTECTING LABOR.

A Ditching Machine for Building New Railroad Beds—A Post Hole Boring Machine—First Steel Sailing Vessel—Notes of Science.

A Ditching Machine for Railway Service.

This is a machine adapted to form a ditch on one or both sides of the roadbed of a railway, the ditching mechanism being operated by engines on the rear end of the platform car on which the apparatus is arranged. The front ends of the sides of each of the scrapers are connected by chains with a draught bar connected with a draught beam pivoted on the car and held in place by a pivoted brace, to permit of swinging the draught beam inward when not in use, the rear ends of the scrapers being also similarly connected to a draught beam. The inner side of each scraper has a pivoted wing, to prevent dirt from falling on the track, and is connected with a link regulating the depth the scraper is to work, while the outer side has a pivoted wing adapted to give the desired slope to the side of the ditch. Each of the scrapers is suspended from a shaft connected with levers pivoted on swivel blocks, sliding transversely in guideways on the car platform, the front and rear levers of each scraper having each a clevis from which a rope extends up to a hoisting drum on a longitudinal shaft journaled in standards. This shaft is actuated by a sprocket chain from the main driving shaft, operated by engines of any approved construction on the rear end of the car. As the car on which the apparatus is arranged is pushed forward by a locomotive, the scrapers dig into the ground until they are full, the car being intermittently moved forward only about the length of the scrapers at a time. The operator then, by means of a clutch mechanism, connects the hoisting drums with the driving shaft, whereby the scrapers are lifted, and the car is drawn by the locomotive to the place of dumping, where the dirt is automatically discharged. After the scrapers are loaded and raised, they may be moved inwardly on the top of the car, to permit of passing through tunnels, over bridges, etc. For the purpose of spreading the dirt at the place of dumping, a special form of spreader is provided for attachment to the machine in place of the scraper.

A Post or Pole Hole Boring Machine.

This machine is mounted on a hand truck, which may be readily shifted about on the ground for conveniently and rapidly boring holes for setting up posts or poles. Figure 1 is a sectional plan view illustrating the means of operating the auger shaft, Figure 2 showing the auger and its inclosing cylinder, Figure 3 a connection between the auger shaft sections, and Fig. 4 the upper end of the auger shaft. The auger shaft is preferably made in sections screwed together, according to the depth of the hole to be made. The shaft is square and passes through a collar in an upper cross bar of the main standards, while on its lower end a cylinder is mounted to turn and slide, this cylinder supporting the ground loosened by the auger and also forming a temporary wall for the lining of the hole. On the upper end of the auger shaft is a cap in which turns a block carrying a pulley, over which passes a rope with a hook at one end engaging the truck axle or other fixed support, while the other end of the rope winds on a windlass, whose shaft is journaled in the main standards. A clutch on the latter shaft is adapted to be engaged by a clutch sprocket wheel connected by a sprocket chain with a sprocket wheel on the driving shaft, the bringing of the clutch into engagement with the sprocket wheel rotating the shaft of the windlass and drawing upon the rope to force the auger into the ground. The driving shaft has on its outer end a hand crank, and on its inner end is a beveled gear in mesh with a gear wheel having a square central aperture, through which passes the auger shaft, as shown in Fig. 1, there being also a similar oppositely arranged bevel gear wheel and shaft with crank handle to be turned by a second operator. In this manner, by the turning of the crank handles, a rotary motion is given to the auger and it is at the same time forced downward into the ground. The pulley block on the upper end of the auger shaft is connected with a rope passing over a pulley at the top of the standards and extending to a windlass on the rear of the truck, by operating which the auger shaft and its cylinder, with the loosened earth the latter contains, may at any time be lifted out of the hole and the cylinder emptied. The standards are connected with the truck platform by hinges, and may be folded back upon the truck when the machine is moved from place to place.

Copying From Nature.

That the designer who copies from nature is the one that attains success most readily can not be doubted, says the Commercial Bulletin. The days of copying from old designs are fast going and now the designer who would keep up with the times must be as original as possible. This has been said many times before by many writers. The most unique method of designing direct from nature, thus assuring originality, is a way which your correspondent has had explained to him recently by one of the designers in a Lawrence mill. This man has designed fancy figured effects for intricate shawl patterns for many years. Since the advent of the demand which calls for a closer imitation of nature in designing, this man has found it to be advantageous to copy from flowers. His ability to copy offhand from a flower model is deficient; so the man does like this: He gets a bunch of roses, or a twig of leaves and buds, and places these upon his design paper. A light pressure with his hands flattens the objects upon the paper sufficiently to permit a true outline to be made of each leaf or flower. This outline he makes by the use of a pencil. Then he is sure of getting the correct forms of the figures. After he has made the outline of each leaf and flower, the bunch is removed and he proceeds to fill in the shapes. Then he checks off the risers and sinkers according to the outlined forms, and thereby is sure of getting the correct shapes of the objects into his design. This appears to be quite a novel way of copying from nature. Any one can do this.

First American Steel Sailing Ship.

At the yard of Arthur Sewell & Co., Bath, Maine, the first steel sailing ship built in America was launched on Feb. 17, 1894. Dimensions: Length over all, 330 feet; length between perpendiculars, 310 feet; beam, 45 feet; depth, 27 feet 3 inches. Designed to carry 4,500 tons dead weight on 22 feet 6 inches draught and to stand without ballast when light in port. She has a flush main deck of steel fore and aft, the whole of which is sheathed with 3½ inches hard planking. The lower deck has stringers and tie plates, and is planked with 2 inches hard pine. There are two steel commodious deck houses, the forward and larger one of which contains comfortable quarters for the crew, also galley, and the donkey engine which works the windlass and dumps by messenger chains. The smaller deck house aft is fitted up for the accommodation of all the apprentices and petty officers, also containing the carpenter's shop. There is a large full poop aft in which is the captain's accommodation, and a nicely furnished saloon 16 feet square, on the starboard side. The mess room and pantry is in the center, while the officers' cabin and two square staterooms are fitted on the port side. The vessel is to be steered by the Waddington screw steering gear, the wheelsman being protected by a steel hood open on the forward end. A large flying bridge is fitted, connecting the poop and topgallant forecastle, and this will undoubtedly prove a great convenience in bad weather. The vessel is rigged on three masts, the lower masts and top masts all being in one length. The pole bowsprit 67 feet long, the lower yards 92 feet long, and the upper and lower topsail yards are all of steel. She will carry single topgallant sails. Has sky sails on the three masts and will spread about 12,000 yards of canvas.

THE DIRIGO.

How to Tell Her Age.

It is a well-known fact that girls of a marriageable age or older, especially the latter, do not like to tell how old they really are, but you can find out if you will follow the subjoined rules, allowing the young lady to do the figuring to suit herself: First, tell her to put down the number of the month in which she was born, then to multiply it by 2, then add 5, multiply by 50, then to add her age, then to subtract 365. Next have her add 115 and then tell the total amount left. In this grand total the two figures to the right will tell you her age and the other the month of her birth. For example, if the amount is 822, she is 22 years old and was born in August—the eighth month.

Floral Flounces.

At the recent drawing room in England several of the new floral flounces were seen. These are an adaptation by a clever woman florist of London of a fashion prevalent in Mme. Du Barry's time, its revival, however, having some distinctly modern effects. It is described as a marvelous woven fabric of delicate foliage and small buds, with a heading of crushed roses or other flowers—all the materials being so worked and fixed that the flounce remains perfectly firm.

PICTURESQUE WORLD'S FAIR, the latest and grandest of World's Fair reproductions, is the ONLY series that appears in nature colors, each of its 256 pictures being reproductions of Water Colored Photographs,

By famous artists, and each one being worthy of a frame. It is also the only work which is indorsed by Director General Geo. R. Davis, and the labor and expense of its production are so great successful imitation is out of the question. All the resources of art and the aid of all modern improvements in printing, in portraiture and in engraving, have been summoned, and the work is what might have been expected from expenditure on such a grand scale. It is so remarkable that the Director General gave promptly to "Picturesque World's Fair" his enthusiastic indorsement and approval. Who better than he should know when at last the Columbian exposition has been rightly pictured, who better than the man who was at the head, whose enterprise and energy afforded so much of the grand impetus of the undertaking, whose whole heart was in the enterprise and who knows its every feature as a father does his child?

THE PEOPLE'S CANDIDATE.

Mr. John Carl Asks the Support of the Voters.

Editor Sentinel.

As some designing parties are seeking to injure my candidacy for mayor by falsely circulating the report that I am an A. P. A. and a Roman Catholic, I emphatically deny such statements, as I am not, nor have I ever been either. I was christened in the Protestant Episcopal church in New York city, March 27, 1846, and in 1871 I was a member of Hiawatha Tribe, No 13, Improved Order of Red Men, located at Covington, Ky. My trade is that of a tobacco manufacturer. When the laboring organizations started I affiliated myself with them and now I am the people's party candidate for mayor of this city. I am doubly assured of the party's unanimous support and they, as well as myself, solicit the support of any and all of the legal voters at the forthcoming city election for the several city officers to be elected, and if elected, I and the party promise you as good city government as ability, strict attention, and honesty can afford, notwithstanding the perplexities to be encountered through the new city charter. LIKE THE BOSSED DEMOCRATIC CANDIDATE, MR H. A. READ, said yesterday, "This is all for today."

Respectfully,
John Carl.

Prof. Wilcox on Marriage.

Prof. Walter F. Wilcox has made a study of marriage and divorce in six states — Vermont, Massachusetts, Rhode Island, Connecticut, Ohio and Illinois—from statistics, fairly complete, ranging over a period of twenty years. His deductions are as interesting as instructive. First, the marriage rate has decreased during this period from 2.3 in Vermont to 7.4 in Ohio; secondly, that the decrease in marriages is more marked in cities than in the country; thirdly, the average of marriage (men) has changed from 26.3 in 1871 to 27.2 in 1890; fourthly, that the divorce rate is gradually increasing; and fifthly, divorces are more common in cities than in the country.

Gymnastic exercise is now an important part of the curriculum in the women's colleges. There are some good all round athletes at the Bryn Mawr college and some of the girls have taken up fencing and boxing. A vigorous set of collegians are the young girls of the Woman's college of Baltimore. All students are required to take the course as an important branch of the college curriculum. In consequence the girls do excellent athletic work in their finely equipped gymnasium under the Swedish women instructors. With agility and grace they march, run, vault, pose, sway, twist themselves into graceful and curious attitudes with great dexterity, swing themselves upon ropes sailor fashion, "skin the cat," as the small boys say, wriggle through the bars of swinging ladders at dizzy heights and perform feats of endurance and strength that even their disdainful brothers might admire. The uniform is a blouse and divided skirt of blue flannel, yellow necktie and shoes.

THE SHAH OF PERSIA

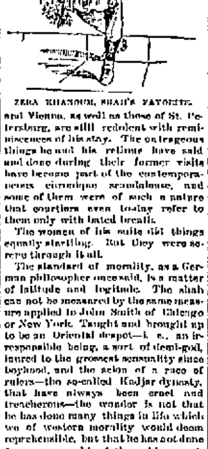

WILL SOON MAKE ANOTHER TOUR OF EUROPE.

The Courts of Christendom Stand Aghast at His Proposed Visit and Wonder if He Will Do as He Did Before—His Numerous Seeghays.

NO MORE THE Shah of Persia threatens an invasion of Europe, and in turn Europe is aghast at the fact. Not because there is any real danger to result from such invasion—for the time when the monarchs of Persia were fierce leaders of warlike hosts and the world trembled at their coming for fear of conquest, rapine, bloodshed and horrors, lie happily in the past—but because his majesty of Teheran is such a queer man.

The courts where he was a guest before, those of Paris, London, Berlin and Vienna, as well as those of St. Petersburg, are still redolent with reminiscences of his stay. The outrageous things he and his retinue have said and done during their former visits have become part of the contemporaneous chronique scandaleuse, and some of them were of such a nature that courtiers even today refer to them only with bated breath.

The women of his suite did things equally startling. But they were secure through it all.

The standard of morality, as a German philosopher once said, is a matter of latitude and longitude. The shah can not be measured by the same measure applied to John Smith of Chicago or New York. Taught and brought up to be an Oriental despot—i. e., an irresponsible being, a sort of demi-god, inured to the grossest sensuality since boyhood, and the scion of a race of rulers—the so-called Kadjar dynasty, that have always been cruel and treacherous—the wonder is not that he has done many things in life which we of western morality would deem reprehensible, but that he has not done far worse, as his father, his grandfather and his ancestors have done before him.

The Oriental—at least the Moslem—has no conception of the meaning we give to our words "love," "affection." The Persian "ishk" means simply sensual gratification, nothing more. The shah, therefore has always looked upon his anderoun, filled with his wives, seeghays, slaves and female attendants, solely as an institution existing for anything but family affection.

A husband he has never been to any one of the large flock of females that have been harbored under his roof, but he has at least been a good natured master. The story is current in Teheran how he once detected proof of a young seeghay's infidelity, and how he not only refrained from ordering her and her paramour to instant execution, but actually divorced the woman and gave her to the man, together with a large dowry and an easy job for the husband.

Indulgent to the inmates of his anderoun, he is affectionate and generous to his numerous offspring and to those of his blood relations to whom he has taken a liking. For one of his little daughters by a low-born seeghay, a very handsome child, he has made a picture book composed of drawings and funny caricatures of his own invention.

A nephew and niece, children of his favorite sister, he likes to have about him during leisure hours, and another young nephew, a boy of but fourteen, he appointed governor or viceroy of Shiraz, one of the best provinces.

W. H. SHAMBAUGH

Makes a Statement Regarding Reports About Himself.

How He Will Discharge the Duties of the Office if Elected Mayor of Fort Wayne.

To the Democracy of Fort Wayne:

The political situation seems to demand of me, as the nominee of the democratic party, a public statement which may settle some of the numerous falsehoods so freely circulated about me.

Let me say that I firmly believe that I have been regularly nominated for the important office of mayor. I know of no frauds having been committed nor have I been a party to a single act of fraud, either in influencing, receiving or counting the votes of any person voting at our recent primaries.

I have the utmost respect and friendship for the gentlemen who opposed me and I have never, by word or deed, impugned their character or aspirations. I accept the nomination, for I believe it was fairly and honestly given me by the majority of the votes at the primaries and the responsibility of election must rest with the democrats of this city.

I want to be elected and will work earnestly for that purpose. I want to state now, once for all, that I have made no promises for positions under the new charter in any of the departments, and if elected, I will use every effort to fill these important places with men of known integrity, ability and character. No man can say more, no man can do more.

I believed and now believe, that a fair trial of government under the new charter will prove its usefulness and that many who now condemn it will be heard to praise it.

I will, if elected, take the oath of office, which requires me to swear that I will uphold the constitution of the United States and of the state of Indiana, and enforce the laws of the state and the ordinances of the city of Fort Wayne, honestly and fairly, without fear or favor.

I am not, I hope, the candidate of an unlawful element, nor am I the candidate of any particular class, creed or race. I am the candidate of the democratic party of Fort Wayne. I am not the agent, attorney or tool of any corporation, public or private, nor am I interested in any job contract or scheme connected with the city.

With this avowal of my position, which I am ready to support at any time, I submit my cause to the voters of this city and before the party for which I have always labored will elect me to the honorable position of mayor of Fort Wayne, for which the democratic party has nominated me.

I shall work earnestly for success and for democracy, and if elected shall try to give satisfaction to all our people.

Respectfully,
W. H. Shambaugh.

A Vanished People.

On the shores of Brittany there is a mysterious relic of forgotten ages which escapes the attention of most travelers. Far out on the Morbihan sea—across which legend tells us Arthur sailed with his knights in pursuit of the dragon—rises a little island. It can be reached in a boat from the coast only in a calm sea. A Breton shepherd has a solitary hut upon it and feeds a few sheep.

Crossing the grassy slope off which they browse, the traveler finds himself at the foot of the hill, in the face of which has been excavated a great tunnel or cave, floored, walled and roofed by huge flat rocks.

Some archaeologists say that this cavern was the work of the worshipers of the serpent god of Hon—a race that has passed into oblivion.

The learned traveler knows only that the mysterious cavern antedates all history; that the rocks of which it is built came from the mainland, a distance of more than 100 miles inland. No rocks like them make any part of the geological formation of the island.

Even with our modern engineering knowledge and machinery it would require vast labor and skill to bring these enormous blocks of stone and place them so accurately as to defy the wear and friction of ages.

How were they brought here by men who had, perhaps, few mechanical appliances—nothing but the strength of their bodies and their faith in a strange god?

The race who built the temple are dust. Even their names ages ago perished from the earth. Their religion is vanished. These stones are the monuments of their indomitable resolution. That defies the flight of years.

The Saengerbund fair will not be closed on Monday, as has been stated, and hence the grand ball will not take place on said day.

WORKING GIRLS IN DANGER.

Rush for Spring Goods Doubles the Strain on Tired Shop Girls—Veneesan Long Way off—How They Keep Well and Strong.

"O men with sisters dear,
O men with mothers and wives,
It's not the linen you're wearing out,
But human creatures' lives."

If Thomas Hood could have looked into one of the big retail stores in any city with the endless streams of eager buyers and the palefaced shop girls behind the counters, he would have included women as well as men in his appeal for more humanity.

In order that some may go finely clad and have leisure, thousands of tired working girls must wear out health, good looks and strength by long, close hours in offices, behind monotonous store counters and in factories.

"Women," as Dr. Weir Mitchell says, "are by physiological nature more liable to be nervous and thin-blooded than are men." It is a sad drawback in the face of the duties of life that a very little emotional disturbance, anxiety or nervous strain suffices to overcome the woman as it does the man, and that the same excesses which make him irritable make her nervous.

The greatest friend tired, feeble women have today is Paine's celery compound, the remarkable discovery of Prof. Edward E. Phelps, M. D., LL. D., of Dartmouth college. This greatest nerve regulator and blood purifier yet known is the mainstay of a great proportion of the homes throughout the country where nervous weakness and feebleness have entered. Paine's celery compound begins at once to rebuild the shattered nerves and nerve centers all over the body. It is the one great spring medicine, because it quickly removes impurities from the blood; gives new life and vigor by filling every tiny ramification of the blood vessels with rich red blood, capable of making healthy tissue.

"The difference between the knowledge of today," says a well-known scientist, "and that possessed before Dr. Phelps' studies of the nerves and their intimate connection with every process in the body, is enormous. Dyspepsia, for example, is now ranked as a nervous disease, and, as in the case of other nervous weakness, it is readily curable by attending closely to the nutrition of the nerve centers with Paine's celery compound. Diseases of the kidneys, heart and the liver are cured in the same radical way by providing abundant and appropriate nutrition for these parts."

"Not more food but better," is the watchword of the best medical skill—better food for nerves and nerve centers. When the system is completely nourished the tired out, run down feeling vanishes, and the craving of the nerves called neuralgia, rheumatism and heart trouble ceases.

"There is one remedy deserving the name of spring medicine—that is Paine's celery compound," said a very careful physician. Sick headache, sleeplessness, mental oppression and lack of energy are cured by Paine's celery compound. It makes people well.

DAISY, DAISY!

Here's another series of World's Fair Views! (Can't ever get enough, it seems.) This time it's "Picturesque World's Fair." Just like water-color paintings.

A Remarkable Woman.

Mrs. Martha J. Lamb is one of the few writers of historical incidents connected with great cities whose patience and industrious research and whose clear and lucid style will outlive her own times. Her "History of the City of New York," in spite of its many shortcomings and the decided effort made by the historian to make the facts related agreeable to the descendants of the persons mentioned, is a work of permanent value. Shortly after its publication, she purchased the Magazine of American History and conducted its pages skillfully and with profit. In her those who proclaim from the house tops the unfitness of woman for labor will find an eloquent reproach. How many men are there whose work is successful in life and whose work lives after them?

LINCOLN TEA

It is the Best Spring Medicine in the World!

HOW true it is that all of the bad feelings that come over us just as the spring is opening are caused by only a slight derangement of the system.

Life is so different in winter from what it is in summer, that the indoor life that people lead during the winter months produces a derangement of the heart, stomach, liver and kidneys, and the moment that active outdoor life begins you hear the expressions, "I don't feel like doing anything! I guess I have the spring fever!" Here is where LINCOLN TEA stands Alone and Unrivaled. It goes, without distressing you, to the root of the trouble and removes the cause, Purifies the Blood, and life is again worth living. For sale by all druggists.

Only two more numbers to complete "Sights and Scenes of the World." No orders will be received after the series runs out. Order back numbers at once.

Insanity.

Having for years paid attention to nervous troubles, and especially to insanity, and after treating many cases successfully, several last year, I feel it to be a duty to say to those who have friends that become insane, that they can generally be restored to perfect sanity, and permanently, in less time at home than if sent to an asylum.
